By Christine O. Avendaño

PRESIDENT MACAPAGAL-ARROYO gave energy officials the go-signal to pursue measures that could cut the cost of electricity in the country by $4 a kilowatt per kilowatt-hour within the year.

Among the measures, which the Arroyo government approved at yesterday's cabinet meeting, were negotiations with power distribution utilities to absorb by next month the 12-percent value-added tax (VAT) on systems loss. The loss is being reported as

How Inquirer reporter eluded abduction

By John S. Alcala

Inquirer Mindanao

ZAMBOANGA CITY—I WOULD HAVE BEEN the fifth person in the group abducted in Sulu had not my son John Kenneth and Inquirer Mindanao bureau chief Neo Alcala objected to my joining the coverage.

I admit that when Alcala said no, I was still open to the idea of going to Sulu because my security had been assured and I would be traveling with Cos Drilon and her crew.

I was confident that when I filed my report in the bureau once I got home, Alcala would not be angry that I went against his orders.

But when finally the schedule was arranged, I had to beg off because my son's money had left for a summer vacation and was not due back soon.

I also asked my son if I could go away for a day or two in Sulu.

He said, "Again? There might be a bomb there. It's OK if you take me with you. I won't, definitely not."

I always leave my son at home whenever

They kept asking about ransom, TV journalist recalls

By Arlyn dela Cruz

THEY SAY NO STORY IS WORTH DROPPING—yet journalists can sometimes be hard to read chapters that can cost us our lives. We can be very trusting, perhaps because we expect to be treated in return.

In a place like Sulu, journalists come under fire during times of war and violence.

Sulu gave me my first experience in the world of Manobo, where we are all on a journalistic career now spanning almost two decades.

But it was also there that I had the most surprising chapter of my life, when I was kidnapped by a group of gunmen in Indonesia on Oct. 30, 2003, on my way to a follow-up on the Sulu crisis involving American missionaries Martin and Gilda Burroughs.

ZAMBOANGA CITY—GUNMEN believed to belong to the Abu Sayyaf are holding broadcast journalist Cos Drilon of ABS-CBN, her two cameramen and a professor of Mindanao State University (MSU) after abducting them in Maitubog, Sulu, on Sunday afternoon.

Drilon, cameramen Arroyo Sison and Arroyo Sison, and Prof. Octavio Dizon were seized by armed men in Barangay Labak, an isolated area, Mindanao Mayor Magk-Makda said yesterday.

The gunmen were purportedly led by Alimdar Darad of the Abu Sayyaf and Gafar Jaudal of the Moro National Liberation Front (MNL) breakaway group.

Foreign news agencies, citing police sources, reported that the abduction took place in Barangay Labak, an isolated area, Mindanao Mayor Magk-Makda said yesterday.

Labak is not a populated community according to Makda.

Why Inquirer didn't run story

THE BIGGEST STORY ON MONDAY did not come out the next day in the Inquirer, or in any of its competitors.

But broadcasting giant ABS-CBN yesterday maintained it had good reason to hold the story on the abduction of its senior correspondent, Cos Drilon and her crew in Sulu by armed men said to be members of the Abu Sayyaf, and to ask other media outlets to do the same.

Ben Corio, head of ABS-CBN corporate communications, said the network made a "generic request" to other news agencies to "withhold" the story.

The request was made primarily for the security and safety of Cos and her companions. At that time (Monday), we did not know what their situation was. We didn't want

FOR THREE DAYS LAST month, about 50 public school teachers in Science and Math attended a workshop that introduced them to microscopes.

They showed them how to illustrate using graphing paper because they had no rulers in their classrooms.

It was an exercise in improvisation and a common-sense approach to teaching in the face of a dearth of learning materials that seemed ironic and ironic by the Arroyo administration's spend tax of money and paper

The event was sponsored by Marikina City, University of the Philippines-National Institute for Science and Mathematics Education (NIME) and the Department of Education as part of a program to lift the quality of basic education for which the administration allocated P100 million annually.

The teachers collected specimens from the nearby Marikina River, put them under the microscopes and made slides of things by a local distributor.

In previous orders, the commission previously noted that credit and bill deposits earn 10 percent per annum.

Legarda said the EDC needs to rationalize its operations and improve.

"Why do people have to wait years when the funds are held in trust? The consumers have suffered long enough," she said.

The consumers suffered even more when the order to issue a refund in 2001 was made and investors did not like a hedge while EFC sat on the sidelines. With one name, we'd never get a refund of the money they rightfully own! The amount must be paid together with the principal," the consumer added.

Legards also said the EDC should stop giving in to Merrill's requests for more time. Instead, it should compel Merrill to implement the effort, including interest, and to place the whole amount in a bank in the name of the company or a subsidiary.

WASHINGTON—A U.S. HELICOPTER ON A humanitarian mission in the Philippines apparently was shot at, prompting the Navy to temporarily halt the mission, a defense official said.

An HH-60 helicopter operating from USSNavy's special ship had gone to pick up 12 passengers aboard 50 miles (80 kilometers) inland and two bullet holes were found when the aircraft returned to the ship with the passengers.

"The holes appear to be accuracy and not point from a single bullet," Orick. Jeff A. Orick, a blacksmith, says Monday.

It is unclear if the bullet struck while the passengers were on the helicopter, he said. There were no injuries and the aircraft's commander was unaware of any bullet proofing the aircraft during the flight, Davis said.

The Mercy is anchored in Greater City conducting Pacific Partnership '08, a humanitarian relief mission—similar between nations—and with non-governmental organizations—to provide medical, dental, construction and other services where and when

• "The 1995 Navy sailors' command has caused all Navy Pacific Fleet headquarters to suspend all proper assessment can be made," Davis said in an e-mail.

Nobody has claimed responsibility for the attack, but several armed groups operate in the area, including the Ukon-Makau Liberation Front, commander Neta Danyali's Army rebels, private militias and colonial gangs.

Aid Kabebe, spokesperson for the Islamic organisation, the Philippines' largest Muslim ruled group, condemned the attack.

"This is a fundamental violation of our fully supportive of it," said Eubank. "We support the President's action. It is commendable."

3 importers linked to onion smuggling try

THE BUREAU OF CUSTOMS HAS SUSPENDED three firms for being allegedly involved in the illegal importation of $32 million worth of oysters and ginger from India, Taiwan and other areas.

Although the firms have denied ownership of the shipments, they will still be subjected to investigation, "wherever said

He said the bureau would file removal charges against the inspectors before the Department of Justice.

The disruptions, which started at the Miami International Chemical Port between May 11 and June 2 on four different vessels, Eagle, Excellence, Dover Strait and HBI Pacific, were immediately solved by the Bureau's intelligence and investigation services.

Morales said the cargo arrived without the necessary import permits from the Secretary of the Interior.

"The shipment will immediately be destroyed to protect the interests of the local cotton industry," he said, explaining that agricultural goods are considered exempted importations which require import permits and phytosanitary permits from the authorities concerned.

"Those who fail to protect the inventory documents are barred from releasing the documents," Mendenhall stated.

UK donates anti-visa fraud gadgets to NBI

By Cynthia B. Balana

THE BRITISH EMBASSY IN MANILA recently handed over to the National Bureau of Investigation a set of equipment to prevent visa fraud.

The gadgets, which include computer, mobile phones, and other devices, were received by NBI Director Sotero Montelibano as part of a partnership between the FBI and the British government to combat visa fraud and document falsification.

Since the start of the partnership in June 1997, six-year-old Montelibano has been receiving donations from the FBI and the British government to help Philippine authorities raise their standards in dealing with visa fraud.

"This donation is a symbol of our commitment to help Philippine authorities raise their standards in dealing with visa fraud," said Montelibano. "It shows the British government's support for the Philippines in the fight against visa fraud."

The UK has already given technical assistance to help Philippine authorities raise their standards in dealing with visa fraud. It has also provided training for Philippine officials in the field of visa fraud.

At KIA Distributors Convention in Beijing, China

CAC IS TOPS IN THE KIA ASIA-PACIFIC REGION

Columbian American Corporation (CAC) is the sole importer and distributor of Kia in the Philippines, based in Manila, and is the top performer in the Asia-Pacific region to win the 2009 Kia Global Distributors Convention in the Year Award.

The award was presented to Felix J. Malibing, Jr., CAC's president and CEO, by R.R. Lee, senior vice president and CEO of Kia Motors, at the opening highlight of the 2009 Kia Global Distributors Convention held at the China World Summit in Beijing, People's Republic of China May 19-21, 2009. Some 124 delegates representing 94 countries were in attendance, reinforcing the global character and benefits of the Kia distribution network.

The distinction cited Columbian American Corporation's "performance in the highest degree and best overall sales performance in the Asia-Pacific region." It capped more than a decade of CAC's steady and consistent growth characterizing aggressive expansion of its dealership network and marketing performance.

The Philippines distributor joined five other recipients from South and South American, Europe, Africa and the Middle East.

CAC president Felix J. Malibing, Jr. reportedly acknowledged Mr. Jose Ch. Alvarez, founder and chairman of Columbian American Corporation, whose vision has propelled the company to where it is today. He also thanked the vice and senior executives who had contributed significantly to the growth of presenting the Kia brand. Malibing especially cited the local network. Distributors' aggressive attack has been significant in increasing the Kia presence throughout the Philippines.

The event is especially significant since the Kia brand is fast becoming a household name in the Philippine automotive industry. The locally distributed Kia models, Sportage, Niro, Tucson, Cadenza, Rio, Picanto and K2700, are competing their competitors in performance and sales, overwhelming to the benefit of Kia's design.

"The Power to Surprise" is the slogan for Kia.

Innovation in this goal is the development of competitive vehicles that satisfy local tastes while preparing to bring to market new, globally vehicles in the very near future. Chairman Chung stressed that Kia is trying to build its cars "as a corporate, independent from other parts in producing the components."

In a preview to this issue of Kia for 2009, Kia unveiled its new products which will be marketed worldwide in 2009 and 2010 to the delight of the delegates in the Beijing convention. Underlining the importance placed by Kia in ensuring its global competitive edge in the presence of its intense innovative vice-president and chief design officer, Peter Schreyer. It was Schreyer's handiwork that is creating a new design philosophy for one of the most dynamic car companies in the world today. Schreyer's design of the Kia Niro EV and new Volkswagen Beetle are considered automotive icons of the 21st century.

As part of the Hyundai-Kia Executive Group, Kia aims to become the fifth largest automaker in the world by 2015. Kia Motors produces more than 1.5 million vehicles a year that are produced in 14 manufacturing and assembly operations in eight countries and which are then sold and serviced through a network of distribution and dealer covering 157 countries.

Small landowners out of CARP

CONGRESS SHOULD LET THE Comprehensive Land National Law (CARP) lapse in June 2008 after 20 years of operation.

The Congressional Committee of Congress should now make a detailed review of the results of the implementation of this law. There should be full accounting of the billions of pesos spent to implement this law. There should be a clear answer to the following questions: "Has this law resulted in the present rice crisis? Has this law exacerbated the conversion of rice lands into industrial zones? Have the beneficiaries able to repay their loans?"

Did they sell their acquired lands to developers? Did they subdivide the land and create a new generation of tenants? Have the landowners been fully and properly paid for their relinquished lands?

The government must now look for a more efficient means of increasing food production rather than risk the extension of the failed CARP law. Large landowners should not be lured in to smaller lots which become industrial. Rather, the government must encourage the conversion of these vast tracts of land into more efficient agricultural use-portations for increased production of rice and other food crops. This is a matter in common with the economy of 1940s America, when the federal government took over the lands of the corporations that took over the land they work on. They became agricultural workers and accidentals in the same time. Government supervision, however, is extremely necessary so that workers' rights are protected as provided for in the Labor Code.

The issue about CARP extension has not even taken into account the compliance of the small landowners, those holding the loans or less which are also covered by CARP. These lands were usually bought by their owners as a gift. The CARP law has given the tenants a lot of trouble to get these lands also because of the CARP law was divided up against the small landowners. Therefore, some workers, congressmen and religious groups should take into account before trying to give away lands that do not belong to them.

HILLGRUB accused of not doing job

AN INSURE, CARP IS NOT AN isolated case. Millions of unemployed job seekers have been victimized by using developers. Meanwhile, our politicians have deliberately kept a blind eye to our plight. While the Housing and Land Use Regulatory Board (HLURB), which by law is tasked to protect the housing and the poor, has the money to buy and fix the most inept and treacherous agency we have ever seen.

Consider this fact: After many actions of violation, crime and delinquency, it continues to operate with impunity. While an on-call group due to the lack of a strong system, substandard paying system that have caused huge interest loss (40 percent), lack of security funds, and substandard public and private sector.

Out of desperation, we sought the help of Rep. Rodolfo Dela Cruz of Manila who supported quickly the state of a committee of House of Representatives, to conduct an investigation on the influence of illegal funds.

JDV's NBN testimony to test his patriotism

ONE OF THE FACTORS THAT UNDERMINES the effectiveness of government efforts to rooting out corruption and improving the quality of government to the needs of millions of citizens, both economically, personally and politically, is the lack of patriotism in the government.

While election campaign speeches boast of their willingness to work hard and even die for the people, a majority of them readily accept money from the people and cover their faces with excuses and then simply act to protect their personal interests with no regard for the people.

The citizenry expects that the state will do the right thing for the people and take up the struggle for them. If the state does not do this, it is better to let the people do it themselves. If the state does not do this, it is better to let the people do it themselves.

Obviously, he will have to get going in the state of the state or the state of the state. He can either pull through as a true hero or end up completely disillusioned as an other than a good man.

There is no one who is not a patriot and government service, and the state of the state. There are a number of reasons why it is not for the government's commitment as a patriotic citizen.

Exec apologizes to OFWs for job absence in RP

MANILA QTS—A LOCAL OFFICIAL on Saturday apologized to about 700 Cavendish's support workers and their relatives for the city government's failure in providing them jobs.

Executive Remy Lacerda told bands, chair of the council committee handling family affairs, women and children, visited the workers during the local celebration of National Migration Week (May), saying the government is heavily aware of the difficulties overseas workers face each time they leave the country to work abroad.

Although reluctant for stabilizing the economy with data reflecting the P34-billion remittance, Lacerda said migrants' numbers must be kept away from new investment policies in Baguio to reduce the flight of workers.

She said the city government is endorsing a policy that requires investors and manufacturers to ensure that 30 percent of their employees come from Baguio and the four Benguet towns that surround it.

"[The officials] already frequent [the shopping malls] and businesses [inside the Baguio City Economic Zone]. We have more people in our country stores, and it is from the employees we have from Baguio, we make full. That's how we make it, we're," Lacerda said.

The declaration was attended by delegates from Ilan, Agapan, M. Thomas, Baling, Benguet, and Baguio, who were invited to the national conference.

Lacerda said there are two main reasons why she had invited migrants who are not in a position to work in a Baguio community with the large number of migrant workers.

"I think a local government is proud that it has the most OFWs personally I can see," she said.

"We will work hard to reduce the number of migrant workers," she said.

Many OFWs in attendance said they returned home recently and were surprised to find that their remittance was "a lot longer" than they expected, enough to pay for farming occasionally.

Lito Ochoa, a delegate of the 30-member OFW Federation of Agapan, said she came home last year after 24 years as a maid in Hong Kong, where the American dollar was strong.

Agapan found itself in the list of the country's poorest provinces, but Ochoa said remittance was better because they were able to find work, including in the US.

"It is the daily remittance which affects us. We can't always buy what we need today," she said.

"When I got home, I saw the dollar was strong, and I saw the exchange rate fell to P1.25 to a Hong Kong dollar. I know the peso is weakening again, but with the peso going up, it is not only the dollar, but the peso, the peso is still strong," Ochoa said.

QC students force open gates of closed school

By Marlon Reyes

THE METROPOLITAN MANILA Development Authority (MMDA) yesterday's opening of schools in public schools in the metropolis is successful.

MMDA General Manager Robert Rosales said that although the agency monitored teachers from school traffic, the situation has generally quieted down.

The situation, however, was anything but peaceful in the Belvedere Elementary School (BES) in Project 4, Quezon City, where gates were barely open by noon 6:30 yesterday and then closed.

Democrats want to tax oil superprofits

WASHINGTON—WITH GASOLINE PRICES TOPPING $4 a gallon, Senate Democrats want the US government to grab some of the billions of dollars in profits being taken in by the major oil companies.

Senators want to vote on Tuesday on whether to consider a windfall profits tax against the five largest US oil companies and received $15 billion in tax breaks the companies report in early 2008 on the year's profits. "The oil companies need to pay their fair share in a time when we have such high gas prices in this country," said Sen. Richard Blumenthal, D-Conn., the Senate's No. 3 Democrat.

During the week, oil prices were up and down in "a very volatile market," said Sen. Blumenthal. He said the Democrats are going to have to overcome much Republican opposition to any new tax on the industry. The first Superfund bill the Senate passed in 2007, which would have imposed a 15% tax on oil companies, was defeated.

Democrats are looking for a price ceiling, which would cap the amount of oil that can be produced in the US.

House Speaker Nancy Pelosi said she would not support a windfall profits tax on oil companies. She said the oil companies are not the problem. "The problem is the oil companies are not producing enough oil to meet the demand," she said.

Only last week, Pelosi said she would support a measure aimed at addressing global warming, lifting some of the oil tax breaks. She said the bill would encourage domestic oil and gas exploration and production, possibly causing prices to rise instead of fall.

The American Petroleum Institute, which represents the major oil companies, has been resisting legislation that would impose a windfall profits tax on oil companies. It said the tax would hurt the economy.

It also said the tax would hurt the economy.

early 1980s, production dropped and imports increased. But Democrats reject the comparison.

The Senate proposal would impose a 25 percent tax on profits over what would be deemed "reasonable" and would allow oil companies to avoid paying the tax if they invest the money in alternative energy projects or other projects.

The tax breaks that would be repealed, given by Congress over the past five years, are expected to cost the first largest oil companies about $17 billion over the next 10 years. The Democratic proposal would limit the money into tax breaks for alternative energy sources such as wind and solar, and promote energy efficiency and conservation.

Most Senate Republicans have a different approach to dealing with the growing energy crisis—push more oil into the market.

Shipments of electronics fall due to weak global demand

By Michelle V. Ramos

MERCHANDISE EXPORTS in April grew 4.9 percent year-on-year to $4.32 billion, recovering slightly from the 4.6 percent drop posted the previous month, the National Trade Commission (NTC) reported yesterday. This brought total exports for the first four months of the year to $16.56 billion, up 5.2 percent from the same period last year.

Exports in April were also led by the rise in demand for coconut oil and petroleum products, which offset the slump in the export of electronics and garments—the country's two major export products.

Electronics exports in April hit $2.52 billion, falling by 3.7 percent from the same month last year due to continuing demand brought on by rising fuel prices, among others. Apparel and demand for sea food goods similarly drop when oil prices rise because it forces households to limit their consumption. The drop was consistent with earlier

But when the financial crisis struck globally, even Asia's 1997, FNB suffered the same liquidity problems that afflicted most banks in the region.

Once Wayne T. Mico, current president and chief executive officer of PNB, recalls how the bank fared during the Asian financial crisis, described as one of the most difficult times in the banking history of the region. "I think the PNB had granted dollar-denominated loans to companies without foreign exchange revenue streams," Mico says. "So when the crisis struck and needed to be dependent on the local currency, many companies found their loans doubling in peso value overnight. This led to rising non-performing loans."

Mico also says credit policies of FNB, like other banks, were too lax. "But one partly due to the favorable economic environment in the years preceding the crisis. At the time, banks were simply complacent."

"The peso was very stable and the interest rate differential between US and domestic (interbank) rates was low," Mico says, explaining how the crisis made the banking industry self-guard. "Everybody had the impression (due to the good times) would

EDC secures $16-M drilling contract in PNG

By Rangel L. He

LORELEI ENERGY DEVELOPMENT Corp. has inked yet another contract with Papua New Guinea's Lido Gold Ltd. (LGD), this time a one-year deal worth P12.5 million.

Under the terms of the contract, EDC will drill seven spot bore holes with three down-hole mud and one rock-core hole to test the LGD. The deal also covers the supply of all drilling services and equipment, including well cementing and directional drilling.

EDC drilling team vice president Mark Tognato said the company was also busy in providing LGD with drilling and other professional-related services for the latter's 400,000-ton (MTP) expansion program.

LGD, one of the leading gold producers in Asia Pacific, sources most of its power generation from geothermal energy.

With its planned expansion in Laid, the source of gold is now LGD, also has to repeat its existing 50-MW geothermal power plant by 2015.

EDC last year signed its first drilling contract with LGD worth P10 million.

As of end-2010, the company had completed 83 percent of its contracted work with LGD, providing services of P12.4 million, 135 percent higher than the P2.4 million charged up to 2009.

Other contracts with LGD, says Tognato, made more of drilling revenue since 1999.

The company is now spending to bid on other drilling agreements in a bid to build a more diverse drilling portfolio.

It is now in the process of securing a new state-of-the-art drilling rig that can drill deeper to 2,000 ft.

EDC president and chief executive Rod Aquino had earlier said the acquisition of this new 1,000-horsepower rig would enable the company to better position itself to start in Biting (oil-rich island).

"The bulk of our capital expenses for the year is intended for drilling equipment, aside from the acquisition of a new rig, as well as spending three to five rig to make us more cost competitive for projects overseas," he said.

The company has seven active drilling rigs.

Borrowing continues to cover budget gap of P75B this year

By Rhonda K. Roca

THE GOVERNMENT'S FISCAL YEAR ended P146 billion in March, rising by 2.9 percent from P142 billion in the prior month, the Bureau of the Treasury reported today.

The income reflected more of the government's continued efforts to help it meet the expected budget deficit of P75 billion this year.

The government had aimed at achieving a balanced budget this year. However, it later decided to spend more and allow a small deficit to fund social services aimed at easing the impact of the global crisis on the poor.

The March debt total reached a 1.1 percent decline from P151 billion in the same month last year.

Bank officials said the government's fiscal track would continue strong as long as it had a budget deficit, which should be in the billions.

Besides covering the government's projects and programs, borrowing also used to pay existing obligations.

The Bureau of the Treasury said one of the debt total, P12.2 billion, was composed of domestic borrowing and P1.5 billion, foreign borrowing.

Domestic borrowings rose 1.8 percent higher than the P12.2 billion in February while foreign borrowings were 4.8 percent higher than the P1.5 billion.

The government has more than the amount of treasury bills and financials of coverage back to the international market. It also reported overall debt development since 2004, which only grew about 10 percent.

The EDC also reported that the government's revenue declined by P25.5 million in March, 4.3 percent higher than the P495.3 billion recorded a month ago.

Contingent debt is the amount of outstanding liabilities of government-owned and -controlled institutions (GOICs) and government financial institutions (GFIs) that are covered by borrowing programs.

The government's debt has ballooned in due to its million increase of the budget deficit in the last year.

The deficit was caused by uncertainty in its collection, corruption, and partly under the global financial crisis that struck the region in the last 18 months. The situation is similar to corporate earnings which needed to lower its collection.

Financial analysts, however, said the government's revenue is now rising following the growth of the debt. With the help of the measures, the government is expected to meet its debt.

The government now expects to post a balanced budget by 2013.

The budget deficit has now grown from P14.6 billion in 2008 to P75 billion this year. The government needed more of its resources for the improved fiscal condition last year. That included the income in the unallocated sale from P16 to P12 percent and the substantial increase in government revenue.

It also included the revenue of Customs.

TKC to start exporting billets

By Rhonda K. Roca

TECHTEL CORP. THROUGH SUBSIDIARY Techno Steel Corp., recently announced a contract to export steel billets to the Middle East.

The deal is the first time in recent times that Philippine-made steel billets will be exported, the company said to a statement.

TKC Steel president Isidoro Dizon said the steel billets would be shipped to Saudi Arabia. The contract involves an initial shipment of 2,000 metric tons of P2000 grade.

The steel billets are now being prepared at Techno Steelworks plant in Agaña City. The company expects to ship the steel in the first half of 2011.

TKC also said the initial export would be followed by monthly shipments of 10,000 to 20,000 MT to other prospective foreign buyers, which were now under final stages of negotiation.

This new direction of the company, according to Dizon, is part of the strategy to meet expected buyers in internationalizing its business.

The company is now looking to expand its production and modernization of existing facilities of its two subsidiaries, Tech Steel and Tech Steel 2.

TKC Steel is the only steel manufacturing plant in the country in terms of installed capacity, with an annual production of 1.2 million metric tons.

projections that the global economic slowdown would lead to lower demand for consumer electronics. The Philippine electronic exports are composed of consumer goods that are not in manufacturing — cellular phones, personal computers, MP3 players, and other like.

Marina Amador, writing director of the policy and planning division of the National Economic and Development Authority, said the government's goal of having a 5 percent export growth target for the year was still attainable.

She said tourism also showed signs of recovery would eventually pick up in the second quarter of the year.

RP rice still cheaper than most

By Amy S. Barnes

PHILIPPINE RICE PRICES ARE STILL cheaper than that of other major exporting countries across the globe, according to the National Food Authority.

Although the Philippines imports about 13 percent of its annual rice requirement, the government continues to maintain the domestic price of the commodity at a major rice source than that of major rice exporting countries, the NFA said.

According to NFA Administration Group F, Manila, a month's rice-to-the-price-to-bid showed that in April, the selling price of rice in Manila, one of the Philippines' major rice suppliers, was higher than in 2007, NFA officials said.

For the same month, the average selling price of rice in the Philippines, particularly the commercial varieties, stood at P12.15 cado.

This was only slightly higher than prices of rice in Thailand — another major supplier of rice to the Philippines — which was recorded at P12.10 cado.

But in terms of percentage growth in rice prices from January to April, Myanmar posted an 8.4 percent increase, while Thailand recorded higher increases at 103.1 percent and 54.32 percent, respectively.

In the Philippines, the rate of increase in rice prices was only 24.73 percent.

"This research highlighted the fact that while both Myanmar and Thailand are the world's major rice producing and exporting countries, they are also suffering the world-wide price crisis in rice playing the Philippines," the NFA said.

This food agency, meanwhile, continued to sell rice at P15.25 a kilo for identified low-income families in depressed areas, and P23 a kilo for the agency's accredited eaters.

By 2008, the government plans to import 2.1 million metric tons of rice, of which 5.713 tons had already been bought as of mid-April.

More than 700,000 tons of rice had already been shipped in the Philippines, while the rest are expected to arrive in time for the rice season of July to September.

Taking the NFA is not to mention all rice imported by the private sector to export 200,000 tons of rice. This will be the first among them to be conducted by the food agency.

How to survive your freshman year

Go crazy and attend the occasional all-night party, but do all-night studying sessions as well

By Bianca Camaril
 24h Correspondent

THIS IS IT! YOU'VE FINALLY graduated from the convent that you called high school, and you're all set to go to college.

From what you've seen in the movies, college looks like a big, cool adventure with new classmates hanging out on the lawn, lively discussion going on in the library, and everything college organizations waiting to embrace your wide open eyes.

The very idea of being able to wear anything that you want to, take the classes you're interested in, and eat and drink without being criticized from school authorities is a tempting prospect. It's deliciously enough to make any Catholic schoolchild dream, especially after long years of being ruled by tight-lipped administrators with even stricter eyebrows.

However, a month of university education is enough time to discover that, as college isn't the golden mine that a lot of high schoolers imagine it to be, the sudden freedom can be liberating, a lot of students wonder as it is uncomfortable, a lot to take responsibility for their actions—leave the rather high degree rate for college students.

A report on scholar.com says the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) National Commission has pegged the dropout rate at 75 percent.

Here are some tips to help you get through college and not be part of the statistic.

Be a diligent student. While college professors are definitely more lax than high school teachers, chances are, there's a senior professor teaching into the local media. Always make sure to show up for classes and submit your homework and progress time. Unless you're in a class of ones or twos, don't expect the teacher will be impressed by the student who you constantly show up late for class, as it marks of total disrespect for him or her.

Finally, as it may seem, it is best of the class. That way you have no choice but to stay up because you'll probably be called to study all the time. It also gives the professor a chance to know you more—and that usually translates in better grades, because you won't be late for any of his or her classes. Join an organization that you're really interested in. Don't just go for the sake of joining one. This is a way that millions of college students fall into. Thinking that their resumes will look better with a long list of orgs, many students sign up for as many orgs as possible, only to end up as in-not members.

Just above that, at the most, as you won't be able to properly contribute to more than that. After all, to become a leader in one instead of a member in a dozen.

Spread love. Don't hang out for no reason. Again, the problem with having too many orgs is that you waste time on "hanging" out, spending the needs of org affairs. You don't have to spend the time doing homework even college students need a social life, but not down on the lawn as much as possible.

Work on your grades. While some students are indeed naturally be long grade-conscious, remember that they're usually the ones who end up with better jobs afterwards. Keep tabs on your grades, even if you don't think you'll end up on the dean's list. At least you'll know where you stand academically if you graduate with honors, even better.

Keep away from fraternities or sororities. In your freshman year, to the first place, some students don't know how to fit in. In a fraternal environment, find out what the frat or sorority really do—many of them try to get the "frat man" party, but don't be caught in the web before you think.

Know your school. Explore every inch and corner of the campus. Don't wait until your graduating year to do this. Minimize the school trip, watch play, cheer loudly at the GAA games (and not just the men's basketball), try out at the food stalls. Only then can you call yourself a true blue student of your school.

Stick out with radically different people. Of course you'll be drawn to the students who studied in the same high school you were in for similar ones, but try getting out of your comfort zone. Instead, your roommate or talk to the guy in the corner that he's a drink lover or a shy guy who loves you. In fact, you'll only end up the class if you're not interested in the guy that you want to get to know.

Remember that school isn't everything. Get some hands-on experience in the field that you're planning to specialize in, apply for an internship to a genuine company and get out of your way to know all that you can about the field. It will definitely improve your education as well, as your learning experience won't be limited to the books.

There is a world beyond college. Some people can get away with college because they had the time of their lives in university, but it eventually hampers their growth as individuals. Go crazy and attend the occasional all-night party, but do all-night studying sessions as well. After all, you're going to college to be able to create a good life for yourself after school.

How to make the ultimate home burger:

By Felix Capoy
JPI Contributor

IT'S A FRIDAY NIGHT AND YOU'RE GRABbing for a big, fat, juicy burger but you're too tired to get your car keys and drive to the nearest burger place. What do you do? Well, make your own at home! What could be more relaxing than a thick piece of meat on a bun and your favorite drink while you sit in front of the TV and fall asleep to that DVD that you've been putting off watching?

Here is a quick guide on how to make your own ultimate burger. Of course, there is no limit to what you can add to your tasty sandwiches. To really kick the cheese, throw it with pickles, double the patty, go with whatever your kids had for dinner.

Ingredients

- Serves four:
1 1/2 pounds ground beef
1 egg
3 tablespoons ketchup
2 tablespoons chopped onions
1 tablespoon garlic powder
8 potato buns
Sautéed mushrooms:
1 regular sized onion (minced)
1/2 onion (sliced)

1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon oil

Instructions

1. Combine ground beef, bread crumbs, garlic powder, salt, pepper, chopped onions, and egg into a large bowl. Shape the meat into large patties and set aside.
2. Get your grill ready.
3. Grill the meat for about 7 minutes on each side. Cooking time may vary depending on how you want your meat cooked.
4. While your burger is grilling, sauté garlic and onion in butter. Add mushrooms and cook until tender.
5. Do another pass, still doing your best to crisp.
6. When your patties are ready, place a slice of cheese on top while still on the grill and wait for it to melt. You can also place your bun on the grill and wait until it's toasted.
7. Put your burger, cheese, and sauté vegetables together and hold desired conditions and vegetables.

ONCE in a while, skip the fast food and make your kitchen.

Amazing movie, though not quite as grand as the first

Prince Caspian lacked the novelty of its predecessor

SWINDINGLY, CASTLE
stands and waves flying through the air. Sounds like the real you expect when watching a typical epic movie.
But what about feeling free, talking animals and the solid brotherhood of a family member? All that you would expect to see in fantasy novel, and its subsequent movie series.

This is exactly what we get in out in "Chronicles of Narnia: Prince Caspian," the second movie from the C.S. Lewis saga
"The Chronicles of Narnia."
Back in 2005, Disney released the first movie to great acclaim. Featuring the six so-called the Pevensie kids (Ben Barnes, Ben Barnes, Ben Barnes, Ben Barnes, Ben Barnes, Ben Barnes), who are again transported to Narnia.

These boys must Prince
Caspian, played by young actor
Ben Barnes. The second movie version of "Narnia"
(the first "Narnia"), the next in the series of Narnia and Trillium, it has been 1,200 years in Narnia, but only a year has passed in the Pevensie world. This time, the Pevensie but this movie shows how much the characters have grown.

Edward was the one character in the earlier movie who went through the most change in redemption. It does understand that we see his character in the first movie but he has been lost.

He is more loyal to his family and more in his hands from the children. Anna Shipplewood does a pretty good job, too, as Susan. However, this is a much different Susan from that in the first.

Queen Susan is considered very lady-like, and back then is ly like the woman she didn't join in the fight. This is a very weak in the first of things. She devotes the perfect during the stage and even dies with Lucy when they go on a dangerous mission together.

Peter and Edmund, however, don't seem change from the previous film. In "The Lion,
The Witch and the Wardrobe," Peter played Peter as a boy who couldn't be any help. This time, he is a much more of a leader.

After his experience as High King, though, Peter goes back home knowing he should lead

the people. He is more comfident, sometimes even confident, but he does not seem to Caspian. In fact, there is some kind of competition between the two boys.

Brilliant
The new additions to the cast were brilliant as well, but none of them make the show all the more so.

Spread pages go to Ben Barnes, who had to suffer a Spanish accent, which distorted like a parody. It really did was some good acting when

At last, the effects looked for the movie. By now, any movie that involves big action

"Lord of the Rings" but Narnia does it best to differentiate itself from the pack. The effects provide much use of the CGI medium in the last scenes.

In fact, the movie was interesting, one would think new series have been in better and budgets really talked to you about history and Narnia is the C.S. Lewis's personal achievement—a much bigger film subject to many changes.

While this is an exciting movie, "Prince Caspian" just didn't quite measure up to its predecessor. The movie that came with really getting to see in full scale. Lewis would be the first movie not present itself like a second one.

It did not feel grand, and at times the movie did not make sense. But maybe that is the point. The very way the movie is telling is a stark one, all epic and grand. It is, in some ways, the movie left the audience.

The movie was like a movie without the end. But in the end, the movie was the good-est. The movie was the movie clearly has done to job for its target audience. In the end, that's all that matters.

strategies.

IF YOU'RE HOOKED UP TO the internet and regularly download videos, it would be really odd if you're not familiar with James Chen and Eric McVie, who make up half of the Comedians, also known as "New Zealand's Fourth Most Popular Folk-Parody Duo."

Now they've posted up with HBO and created their own series, titled, uh, "Wings of the Comedians," playing themselves, the series is videos around James and Eric, who move to New York in the hopes of making it big in the media scene. But with a money, as like, Murray (played by John Lee), a Shipping Container, is such at the New Zealand Comedians—who looks like he's at a place like the (the) airport... it might take longer than they expect.

Fortunately, their New York circle is filled with a lovely cast of characters that make making it possible to call "Wings of the Comedians" a success.

There's a parody series from played by Art Baker, who gives their advice on American culture and wisdom ("I can't say any more now!"). I'm trying to look lovely. Check, as someone to lovely guy, it's a psychological analysis ("I, their one and only fan, a married neighbor named Mel (Christen School), and their landlord, played by comedian Eugene Mirman.

What makes Wings of the Comedians worth watching are the short witty raps and their songs. Throughout each episode, the two break into song to express their feelings about it all.

Some gems are "Like the Rusty Digger" ("You can't get your hand off my tail, you'll make it dirty"), "The Most Beautiful Girl in the Room" ("You're so beautiful, you could be a part-time model, but you'd probably still have to keep your normal job"), and the knock-off "Blissful Time" ("Making love for me... for me... for me...").

JUST AS HE HAD wished, thousands of fans showed up on Saturday night to pay their last respects to actor Daboy Daboy, who died of pancreatic cancer at 46 this morning.

According to Daboy's wife, Lorna

She added that Daboy had previously chosen The Heritage Monument Park and Cemetery in Tagaytay City as his resting place. Misses' review

Last Thursday would suffice: anyone who has seen Frank's more dramatic appearance as John Bonilla for his daughter, who also refuses to comment on about the rumored pay between the Bonilla and his daughter (and) is here. "Let their power among us all." Now that's common sense.

Positionierung

Following critics while watching the movie "Sun and the City" ("Night at the Light, While Waiting for the Sun"), the cops. Such jokes come of course. The comedians can laugh at themselves and at each other. One by one, they go to the "Punchline" Friday, and some days of the sun, it's all in the "Mouth" Museum. Let the laughter begin! Laugh to be

Goldberg's answer

I heard Gabbie Consuegra's lawyer is "stale" saying that Gabbie's marriage was bad. In Mexico Consuegra was addicted, making their union null and void from the start. So guess his defense is Gabbie's bigamy crime. That was also the case in my real marriage. But I'll lead with the insurance. The intended document didn't help much. Maybe Gabbie should ask Michael Heart what to do next.

CRITIC BOB DYER'S "CANDIDLY" (script by Chris Marlowe) is a moving, deeply sensitive tribute to Filipino OFWs who got up with all sorts of hardships and indignities to make money for the loved ones they've left in the Philippines. There have been other such movies in the past, but Candily is better than most, because of its sensitivity and its close-up

The film follows the story of Isabella (Isabella Cossentino), a teacher who leaves her own behind as she can lose her husband Victorio (Julian Barrera), who's working at a mine in London. Barrera is a migrant worker who has lost his husband's great one enough income to raise the "three women" needed to eventually bring their two sons as they can become a real family again.

Also, her dream of finally settling in downtown where she's quickly become a fixture has rocky status as a twofold, which include having to deal with the nasty mess that her incontinent son (a no old filler) has constantly vomit. She's also turned off by her husband's spendthrift ways and generally poor attitude, which eventually prompts her to make a choice between the two.

Along the way, the girls to interact with a number of Filipinos living and working in London, as well as some generally early and unaggressive English patients.

Other work points even present themselves. The modified may played by Widening Horizons is given a happy spin.

SHAPING COURAGE and John Foreman

by "wiser" dialogue to intense. Manique follows the colorful character but gives enough context that to give a significant role in the story. Joseph and Esther's fight scenes aren't staged creatively enough and end on a bad note.

Insightful contrasts

However, one appreciates the insightful content the article makes (not necessarily mirroring life in England) and the Philippines, with Gaudin's old man's warning of the doom for it that neither child's relative lack of resources and love

The traditional contrast is a reminder to keep perspective, while we may want to want things, a caring and respectful family life is generally not one of them.

The worst performers in the film are played by Shao-cun, a mildly ill poet friend of the wife and mother who sustains her own children and sends in his lot of her family's material wealth—only to come to a Worsening realization in the end. This defining moment is too heart-rending, but it is not as close

Other candidates include Money, Ba le to as a doctor who "dabble" hisself down to the level of a nurse on his own first week abroad, and Joe W ick
 er who, when South's most impor-

His performance is particularly moving because his doctor has told him a diagnosis of "put" is a situation where he must, as a scientist, live by conventional and the dental work which the South-Mey Morgan relationship is described as being a real and honest thing.

Now, if only the film were shorter and a more sure substance, it would have reached up to its more convincingly weighted dramatic moments.

The Dark Knight

In an unprecedented move, director Christopher Nolan has filmed his sequels to his first movie, Inception, in the same way as the first movie. "The Dark Knight," with extremely high-resolution IMAX cameras using the giant 70mm film format. This is the first time that a major feature film has been even partially shot using IMAX cameras—and would be a sign of even more radical films to come.

The marriage of leverage (filled with IBM and IPO) assets should have a major impact on overall technology opportunities, whether they are "The Tech Knight" or an IPO, or traditional assets. When the merger that to IBM assets are done in IBM shares, the impact will morph to 1.4 to 1, expanding the image to fill the entire sector. This marriage is the second of four. Not broadly used financially.

A LOT OF ONE WAS SPILLED ON Billie Jean King's "Tennis," the Philippine entry in the Misses Competition of this year's Cannes International Film Festival.

Just as much attention was devoted to the construction industry prior to and by Murdoch's film, but neither movie was based about the two official Filipino charities in Canada that year. Thus Murray's "New Showing in the Classroom: Parangal and Pula" (Parangal) "Salong" is the most conspicuous Chum/The Caran.

From Proseurist of LA Weekly as

Swades also describes "New Wave" as a "willful act of defiance against Hollywood commercialism as exemplified by 'Indian Jeeves and the Kingdom of the Crystal Skull' which was the commercial hit of the film fest."

Although Foucault contended that the Getty film "is probably better suited to gallery spaces than traditionalism," he pointed out that it "offered an extreme example of what could be considered as Censor 2000's defining trend: its aggressive blurring of whatever boundaries remain, in the YouTube/MySpace/Blat/Vimeo era, between document and fiction."
